

WE'RE CONTINUING THE UC MERCED EQUITABLE DECARBONIZATION PLAN!

Please join us for a workshop that delves into the intersection of decarbonization and climate justice, with a focus on UC Merced's role as a living laboratory for sustainability. Building on the success of our initial workshop, we're excited to dive deeper into inclusive discussions on equity, transparency, collaboration, and adaptability — all vital elements for a sustainable future!

Join us as we identify risks, forge partnerships, and discuss transformative changes to propel UC Merced towards a more impactful future. Your participation shapes our collective journey towards positive change in the region.

Don't miss out — let's make a difference together!

WHAT IS AN EQUITABLE DECARBONIZATION PLAN?

A decarbonization plan is a roadmap to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by shifting away from fossil fuels and embracing cleaner energy sources. Equity is crucial to these plans because it ensures fairness, justice, and social cohesion. By prioritizing equity, decarbonization efforts aim to distribute the benefits and burdens of the transition fairly, address inequalities, and engage diverse communities in crafting solutions that meet their unique needs. This approach not only maximizes the effectiveness and sustainability of decarbonization strategies but also fosters a more inclusive and prosperous society where everyone can thrive.
